CHAMPION RIGHTS

ADVOCACY SUCCESSES, BY COUNTRY, 2016–2019

IPPF’s advocacy creates an enabling environment to increase access to services, promote sexual and reproductive rights and gender equality, and reduce stigma and discrimination. IPPF makes a significant difference to the lives of millions by advocating for changes to laws and policies in support of sexual and reproductive health and rights, and opposing those that are harmful.

From 2016 to 2019, IPPF contributed to 625

policy and/or legislative changes in support or defence of sexual and reproductive health and rights

536 changes in 106

countries

62

regional changes

27

global changes

Asociación Chilena de Protección de la Familia (APROFA)

In 2017, a new law was adopted permitting abortion in limited circumstances in Chile. However, barriers to providing safe abortion continued to exist. Although WHO recommendations for safe abortion require mifepristone and misoprostol for gynecological use, these were not registered in Chile. For two years, APROFA advocated to the Ministry of Health, preparing and submitting the necessary technical documentation. Finally, in October 2019, both mifepristone and misoprostol were registered, significantly increasing the sexual and reproductive rights of women by making the provision of safe medical abortion a reality.

Tajikistan Family Planning Association (TFPA)

TFPA collaborated with government ministries and committees to establish a multi-sectoral and well-coordinated response to gender-based violence with strengthened collaboration between key structures and the development of new policies and standards. TFPA, working in close partnership with the Republican Centre for Family Medicine and UNFPA, created new Standard Operating Procedures specifically for healthcare and social workers. These include clear guidelines on the provision of psychosocial services for survivors of gender-based and domestic violence which had not been available previously.

Sudan Family Planning Association (SFPA)

To address the unmet need for contraception, the government of Sudan launched its first National Family Planning Strategy in 2019. The strategy addresses the determinants of family planning utilization and prioritizes access to quality integrated contraceptive services. It addresses the steps for effective implementation of the strategy to increase demand for and uptake of modern contraceptive methods. SFPA worked closely with the Ministry of Health in the taskforce meetings, providing guidance and actively participating in the development and drafting of the strategy.

Associação Caboverdiana para a Protecção da Família (VERDEFAM)

VERDEFAM engages civil society to raise awareness of gender equality issues and to advocate for women's equal economic and political participation as necessary factors to achieve sustainable economic growth. As part of the Cape Verdean Parliamentary Women Network, VERDEFAM has been advocating for a new Parity Law, holding one-on-one meetings with policy-makers and providing technical support in drafting the new law. In 2019, the Parity Law was approved requiring equal female representation in government and full participation in policy-making.

Rahnuma-Family Planning Association of Pakistan (Rahnuma-FPAP)

To improve access to modern contraception and reduce maternal and child mortality rates in the region, the Sindh government passed the Sindh Reproductive Healthcare Rights Act 2019. It promotes access to information, allowing service users to make informed and autonomous decisions about their contraceptive choices, free from coercion or force. Rahnuma-FPAP engaged with policy-makers, parliamentarians, media, civil society and youth to build the necessary support for this legislation and provided technical guidance to the government during the development of the new law.

Family Planning New Zealand (NZFP)

The first national Child and Youth Wellbeing Strategy was approved in 2019. It includes a focus on supporting young people to make healthy choices around relationships and sexual health through access to information and education as well as sexual violence prevention services. NZFP provided written submissions and made presentations to the Committee of the Department of the Prime Minister. Recommendations to make changes to language and to reframe messages on sexuality more positively were developed by NZFP and a focus on empowering young people to make safe choices was highlighted as a critical aspect in the strategy.

IPPF Arab World Region (AWR)

Launched in 2019, the Arab Council for Population and Development (ACPD) will support individual Member States to align with both international and regional agreements, provide technical assistance and guide the development of population strategies to respond to national contexts. This is an important mechanism to achieve the Sustainable Development Goals and to realize sexual and reproductive health and rights and gender equality in the Arab region. At the annual meetings of the national councils and committees on population and development, IPPF Arab World Regional Office representatives contributed to the development of the recommendation to establish the ACPD as well as successfully advocating to Health Ministers and Chairs of the national councils to join and support the initiative.

IPPF (global)

At the 41st session of the UN Human Rights Council (HRC) in 2019, revised resolutions were adopted on the Elimination of all forms of discrimination against women and girls and Accelerating efforts to eliminate all forms of violence against women and girls. The resolutions call on Member States to promote and protect women's and girls' sexual and reproductive health and rights. For the first time, the HRC recognized that domestic violence is not a private family matter and that intimate partner violence impedes women's ability to remain and advance at work. IPPF worked closely with civil society partners and Member States on a strategy to secure progressive language and defeat the proposed harmful amendments. This contributed to both resolutions being adopted by consensus.
